- The Frame & Analytic Contact within Technological Everywhereness
- My Robot Unconscious, Then & Now
- What Does Our Technology Want & What Can It Offer?

It’s been said that it’s not possible to do therapy today without considering technology. Responding to that claim, the 2016-17 ISG will explore clinical and theoretical implications of the last quarter century’s accelerating technological developments. We will consider whether these changes demand corresponding alterations in therapeutic technique, including the frame-altering deployment of Skype and texting. For example, might relational practice or modes of intervention derived from field or trauma theory respond better to the needs of a techno-savvy, techno-anxious, or technophobic patient population than more classical “one-person” modes of practice? Do the new self-representational capacities afforded by digital media resemble transference and enactments as they instrumentalize resistances and provide leverage and genuine pathways for psychoanalytic psychotherapy and personal growth?

For a full course description and descriptions of each of the four sections, please visit www.ncspp.org.

This course will provide theoretical knowledge and practical approaches for treating older and medically ill adults. Key concepts include empirical support for psychodynamic therapy with this population, the manic culture of medicine and how this impacts relationships with medical clinicians, and how individual manic defenses can thwart successful adaptation to aging or illness. We will also explore the trauma of medical illness itself, past trauma/s, and how this impacts coping with aging or illness. We will consider transference and counter-transference dynamics related to health and age, and look at how narcissistic and other defenses (e.g., dissociation) can create a paucity of internal life and limit relationship with one’s own mind. We will also discuss how to help patients develop emotional language to bridge mind and body; specific interventions that speak to somatic experiences while simultaneously addressing unconscious anxieties; and how to think about and work with patients who have bodies that are physiologically sensitive to stress and easily develop physical symptoms.

DIFFERENCE MATTERS!
Speaking Psychoanalytically of Race, Culture, and Immigration

Instructor: Sue Saperstein, MFT, Psy.D.
CE: 8 CE Credits
Location: San Francisco Center for Psychoanalysis (SFCP)
444 Natoma Street, San Francisco, CA 94103
Dates: Fridays, October 7 – 28, 2016
Time: 2:00 – 4:00 pm
Tuition: $280 General Public | $200 NCSPP Full Members
$176 NCSPP CMH Members | $160 Friend of NCSPP Members
$160 Associate Members | $120 NCSPP Student Members

“From the very beginning, Freud claims to establish an essential continuity between the ‘clinical’ and the ‘cultural’ dimensions of his works...”

Difference matters! At this time in history, psychotherapists are met with incredible diversity in our offices and clinics. We will consider culture, race, ethnicity, and immigration from a psychoanalytic viewpoint, and attend to the implications and influences of difference(s) on the therapist and patient — different generations, races, classes, etc. Traumas that are embedded in racialized histories must be located in the countertransference, recognized, and articulated. Immigration often disrupts families and includes psychological impacts that may interrupt treatment unless the impacts are considered. Further, we will appreciate the radical differences between what may be thought of as “Eastern” and “Western” minds in the individual and between patient and therapist.

To remedy fear of the “other,” we need to stay curious and open. If there is to be true potential for mutual growth and development in our clinics and offices, our field, and our worlds, we must attend to the ways difference matters.

$180 NCSPP Associate Members | $135 Scholarship Rate (prior approval required — see website for details)

Winnicott made unique contributions to psychoanalysis, offering a two-person model of psychoanalysis. In this seminar, we will further examine his innovative theoretical ideas, such as understanding the mother/infant dyad as a metaphor for the importance of environment in adult clinical theory. We will look at how he saw play as a key method of communication and movement for therapist and patient; how he linked aggression with growth leading to the patient developing “a capacity for concern” (the depressive position); and think about his contribution in terms of race, gender, and sexuality.

9TH ANNUAL PSYCHOANALYTIC COUPLE PSYCHOTHERAPY EVENT

Approaching Couples through the Lens of Link Theory

Sponsored By: NCSSP & PCPG
(The Psychoanalytic Couple Psychotherapy Group)
Instructor: Monica Vorchheimer, M.A.
Discussant: Julie Friend, Ph.D.
CE: 6 CE credits
Location: The David Brower Center
2150 Allston Way, Berkeley, CA 94704
Date: Saturday, October 22, 2016
Time: 9:00 am – 4:00 pm
Tuition: $210 General Public | $160 NCSSP Full Members
$140 NCSSP CMH Members | $90 Friend of NCSSP Members
$90 NCSSP Associate Members | $40 NCSSP Student Members
$40 Scholarship Rate (prior approval required — see website for details)

Join NCSSP and PCPG for a special event to introduce the innovative Latin American psychoanalytic model called Link Theory to the San Francisco Bay Area psychoanalytic community. Our visiting scholar, Monica Vorchheimer, is an award-winning training and supervising psychoanalyst and couple psychotherapist from Buenos Aires, Argentina. She will describe the historical background and theoretical concepts that constitute this rich and unique approach to understanding relationships.

Traditional psychoanalytic models have relied on the concepts of transfer- ence and projective identification to understand relating. In contrast, Link Theory emphasizes the dialectic between internal representations and the external world, including its social and cultural aspects, and highlights the importance of the other as a unique subject, rather than as an internal representation. This presentation will describe this perspective’s value when working with both individuals and couples. Monica Vorchheimer will illustrate the theory with a couple case presentation.

NEW THIS YEAR!
Additional Learning Opportunities

Readings in Link Theory
The Psychoanalytic Couple Psychotherapy Group (PCPG) will host a special series of reading seminars, open to all interested clinicians, focused on Link Theory prior to the October Annual Lecture with Monica Vorchheimer. Contact PCPG at pcpgbayarea.org or Dr. Shelley Nathans at DrShelleyNathans@gmail.com for more information.

New Voices in South American Psychoanalysis:
A Clinical Forum Using Link Theory with Argentine Psychoanalyst
Monica Vorchheimer
The San Francisco Center for Psychoanalysis (SFCP) and The Psychoanalytic Institute of Northern California (PINC) will co-host an individual case presentation with Monica Vorchheimer at SFCP on Monday, October 24, from 7:30 – 9:30 pm. This event is open to all interested clinicians. For registration and information, go to sf-cp.org or pincsf.org.
INTRODUCTION TO BRIEF PSYCHOANALYTIC PSYCHOTHERAPY

Course

Instructor: Peter Hobson, Ph.D.
CE: 12 CE Credits
Location: Fort Mason Center,
2 Marina Blvd., Room C205, San Francisco, CA, 94123
Dates: Friday & Saturday, November 4 & 5, 2016
Time: 9:30 am – 4:30 pm
Tuition: $500 General Public | $380 NCSPP Full Members
$340 NCSPP CMH Members | $320 Friend of NCSPP Members
$320 NCSPP Associate Members | $260 NCSPP Student Members
$260 Scholarship Rate (prior approval required — see website for details)

This course introduces a particular approach to conducting Brief Psychoanalytic Psychotherapy. Dr. Hobson will consider the principles and practice of working in the transference within the framework of an individual, 16-session treatment. He will provide case illustrations with a focus on moment-to-moment transactions in therapy, tracing the trajectory of treatment over 16 sessions. Discussion includes selection of patients, pressing clinical issues, and limitations of the approach. This course is useful for those interested in Brief Psychoanalytic Psychotherapy who encounter patients interested in time-limited work and/or those in settings where long-term work is neither funded nor available.

BEYOND THE CONSULTING ROOM: A Conversation with Amy Weston, Ph.D.

Salon

Instructor: Amy Weston, Ph.D.
Interviewer: TBA
Location: C.G. Jung Institute of San Francisco
2040 Gough Street, San Francisco, CA 94109
